

CANDID

This study is looking to try and identify early symptoms which may be important in the diagnosis of cancer, and those that are not – specifically lung and bowel cancer.

When Doctors and researchers are trying to understand more about diseases like cancer, we often ask thousands of patients to share information regarding their symptoms and lifestyles. By looking at large amounts of data we may be able to identify triggers that may have an impact on the development of disease.

That's why at this surgery we are asking patients who are >35years of age with bowel or lung symptoms to participate in the study. By being asked to participate does not mean we think you have cancer.